A dirty world, but getting dirtier?

Environmentalists say the country's air and land quality will get worse if Congress slashes federal funding during a vote next month. Officials with the Environmental Protection Agency agree that recently proposed budget cuts for the EPA and other federal agencies would undermine the very ability to "implement its core mission of protecting human health and the environment." {page 04}

Full-court press for privatizing liquor

Former PLCB chief says converting state-run sales has most support in years Opportunity ripe with big cash needs, GOP in governor's mansion

RIKARD LARMA/METRO

▶ Auctioning off 1,250 retail liquor licenses would bring in anywhere from $25,000 to $1.25 million, depending on location. Gov. Corbett said the instant revenue of up to $2 billion could go toward a new annual fund for transportation needs.

Potential $2B in cash

Legislators say that liquor privatization will have revenue pouring into Pennsylvania.

"Pennsylvania is a wealthy, populous state, but it ranks very low in per capita consumption of wine and spirits. Neighboring states ... rank very high and that's because Pennsylvanians purchase a lot of products out of state." NEWMAN

Pennsylvania is seeing movement in the push for privatization — and it's now or never, according to the former chairman of the state's liquor control board.

"We have a governor that supports privatization, a minority leader leading the charge and a pro-business Senate," said former PLCB chair Jonathan Newman, who now owns booze chain Newman Wine & Spirits in 10 other states. "We have one opportunity for privatization to happen where it's failed under [former governors] Thornburgh and Ridge and if it doesn't happen now, I don't think it's going to happen for at least another generation."

Newman was at the Wine School in Fairmount yesterday with Rep. Mike Turzai, R-Allegheny, to announce his support of Turzai's privatization bill.

"Jonathan is probably the gold standard in terms of knowing how to bring quality products and services to the consumer while doing it in a responsible manner," Turzai said. "Nobody has a more detailed understanding, both from public and private sector experience."

The House Liquor Control Committee will hold public hearings on the bill in Harrisburg on Aug. 10 and in Hershey on Aug. 11.

GET MORE METRO ONLINE: WWW.METRO.US/PHL

"It's a monumental challenge, don't get me wrong, but it's also timely because of budgetary constraints," Newman said. "This is a resource where the state can generate revenue, lower taxes and increase the tax base by keeping Pennsylvania shoppers in Pennsylvania instead of turning them into bootleggers by forcing them to go out of state to buy liquor."

Pa. vs. Utah

Utah is the only state other than Pennsylvania that has a monopoly on retail and wholesale liquor sales. Here's how we measure up:

Population:
- Pennsylvania: 12.6 million
- Utah: 2.8 million

Number of state stores
- Pennsylvania: 640 (60 in Philly alone)
- Utah: 44 (and 100 smaller "package" stores in rural areas)

Total state revenue from alcohol sales last year
- Pennsylvania: $1.9 billion
- Utah: more than $100 million

Woman found murdered

Police discovered a woman's body early yesterday morning on a Kensington street.

A white female, believe to be about 35 years old, was found at about 4:15 a.m. lying near a vehicle parked on the 3200 block of H Street, just a few blocks from the intersection of Kensington and Allegheny avenues.

The woman suffered severe head trauma, but it is not yet known if she was beaten or shot. She was pronounced dead on the scene and detectives have ruled the death a murder. The investigation is ongoing. METRO/AW

Parks, nature face 'largest attack'

◗ Environmentalists descended on Center City office of Sen. Casey to raise concern ◗ Congress considering big cuts to EPA, Interior in 2012 fiscal year's budget

Activists from the Sierra Club, the Clean Air Council and Greenpeace did their part yesterday in protest of a bill in Congress that would have broad consequences for the environment.

A group biked down the Schuylkill River path, ending their trip at U.S. Sen. Bob Casey Jr.'s Center City office. An appropriations bill for federal agencies like the Environmental Protection Agency would cut funding by as much as 18 percent.

"This is the largest attack on air, water, land and wildlife in decades," William Kramer of the Sierra Club said. "Although polls show most Americans care about the environment and pollution, the elected officials are on the payroll of who will pay their campaign contributions."

FOR AN IN-DEPTH LOOK AT EPA CUTS

WWW.METRO.US/PHL

Wearing breathing masks displaying "Brought to you by Big Coal," they called for Casey to oppose these federal budget provisions. The display was in reference to the proposed changes to the Clean Air Act, which will restrict the EPA's ability to enforce safeguards on coal ash disposal or control carbon pollution.

Casey was not available when the group arrived, and they were informed that he was still "considering" his options.

Activists' fears

Here's what Kramer described yesterday as problems with the bill — and what the EPA and other agencies say it will allow:

- More offshore oil drilling
- Uranium mining in the Grand Canyon National Wildlife Federation: Provisions have also been included to allow mining on 1 million acres. "The policy riders and extreme cuts in this proposal mark a radical departure from America's longstanding national commitment to protecting the air we breathe and the water we drink."
- More dumping of waste and pesticides into water. EPA: "The Clean Water Act will be weakened against pesticides; the EPA will lose much of [its] ability to regulate toxic substance waste and ... control carbon pollution with court orders.
- Lowering regulations on mercury use

Bail collection nears $1 million in 2011

- Part of ongoing initiative at city courts to increase bail payments
- Still just a small fraction of epic amount owed over last 40 years

One year after launching a major bail collection initiative, Philadelphia officials now say they are nearing the $1 million mark.

The "Stand Up, Pay Up," campaign was one of many announced last year to help the city recoup critical funds. First Judicial District officials hoped to collect as much as $1 billion through mailings, publishing the names of those who owe online and making public service announcements. Between January and June, the city has collected $873,000 — putting it on pace for $1.4 million for the year, according to Court Administrator David Wasson.

By the numbers

Average per person of uncollected bail owed

$873K

Amount collected between January and June, including current and outstanding charges

Last year, court officials estimated that the money could be owed by as many as 200,000 people dating back 40 years for failing to appear in court.

The money collected goes the city's general fund. While $1 million represents less than 1 percent of the city's budget, Wasson said officials have noticed an overall improvement in bail payment since announcing the effort.

The list is still being published online, Wasson said, and the city remains vigilant about going after those who fail to pay or otherwise make payment arrangements.

"We're getting people to start paying on their judgments quicker. It's cut down somewhat on the number of people who are failing to appear going forward knowing that there's some kind of tangible penalty."

Debt plan becomes official

WASHINGTON. The United States stepped back from the brink of default yesterday, but congressional approval of a last-gasp deficit-cutting plan failed to dispel fears of a credit downgrade and future feuds over taxes and spending.

Senate approval on a 74 to 26 vote of the $2.1 trillion deficit-reduction plan drove away the immediate specter of a catastrophic U.S. debt default.

President Barack Obama immediately signed the bill into law. REUTERS

Broadband closer to claimed speeds

- New study shows providers are within 80 percent of advertised speeds
- Two years ago, only half as fast as what companies were promising

Broadband speeds on average are within 80 percent of what major Internet service providers advertise — a big improvement from two years ago, according to a government study.

The Federal Communications Commission studied cable, DSL and fiber-to-the-home services at 13 top U.S. broadband providers.

The agency found Verizon Communications Inc.'s fiber network was best at meeting or exceeding advertised maximum download speeds, while Cablevision Systems Corp was the worst.

Overall, the numbers were a big boost from 2009, when data-indicated download speeds were often about half of Internet service providers' maximum advertised speeds.

"This represents a significant improvement over the findings from two years ago when we first shined a light on this issue."
FCC CHAIRMAN JULIUS GENACHOWSKI

"Most major ISPs are providing service close to what they're advertising. This represents a significant improvement over the findings from two years ago when we first shined a light on this issue," FCC Chairman Julius Genachowski said.

During peak consumer usage hours when networks are busiest, actual download speeds varied from 114 percent to 54 percent of advertised speed among the different ISPs, the FCC said.

The report comes as the FCC is promoting its National Broadband Plan. It is a blueprint for expanding coverage, making more airwaves available for mobile services and upgrading Internet speeds up to 25 times recent averages. REUTERS

Best and worst

Which companies are actually providing the Internet connection speeds they advertise?

- Comcast, Cox and Verizon largely perform well.
- Cablevision, AT&T, MediaCom and Frontier "all fail to deliver their customers the quality of service promised."

US heart trials use overseas patients

NEW YORK. Major U.S.-sponsored clinical trials on heart disease often turn to other countries to recruit patients, and a new report questions whether that undermines the evidence they generate and the health of the American clinical trial system.

Researchers found that of 24 U.S. taxpayer-funded clinical trials on heart disease in the past decade, 19 included patients from other countries. Across 11 of those studies, international patients accounted for nearly half of participants.

That high international involvement raises several concerns, according to Dr. Venu Menon and his colleagues at the Cleveland Clinic in Ohio.

One is whether the results of a trial that includes people from other nations — and possibly with varied demographics, lifestyle habits and health care systems — can be reliably applied to the U.S. population. REUTERS

Birth control, services now free

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services has issued new guidelines ensuring that women will receive birth control and other preventive care for free.

Under the guidelines, new health insurance plans will be required to cover women's preventive services — including annual visits to the gynecologist, breast-feeding support, sexually transmitted infection counseling and domestic violence screening — without charging a co-payment, co-insurance or deductible.

Quoted

"The Affordable Care Act helps stop health problems before they start."
HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES SECRETARY KATHLEEN SEBELIUS

Additionally, the guidelines state that contraception and screening for gestational diabetes, human papillomavirus and HIV must be issued to patients free of charge. DNA testing for women 30 and over will also be covered under these new guidelines.

Insurance companies must include these services, without cost-sharing, no later than Aug. 1, 2012. MAINSTREET.COM

Metro's Dorothy Robinson shares her take on the world of gossip @dorothyatmetro dorothy.robinson@metro.us

▶ What's this all about? Ryan Reynolds and Sandra Bullock got all googly-eyed a the premiere of "The Change-Up" on Monday. Are they in like or are they better actors than we give them credit for?

A photo op for the ages

Does she know how to make an appearance or what? Sandra Bullock, a hot 47, surprised photographers and stars alike on the red carpet for the premiere of "The Change-Up" on Monday night. She showed up midway through the press interviews to snuggle up to Ryan Reynolds, 34, her co-star in 2009's "The Proposal." Reynolds, who was giving interviews alongside co-star Jason Bateman, broke free from reporters to greet her, per People magazine. The two exchanged a peck on the cheek and a hug.

Of course, having two stars who have recently been through divorces (while dodging rumors of their own shacking up) popping up together in front of a bazillion reporters is all a ploy to generate interest in the fact that "The Change-Up" is opening this Friday. But still! This makes me hope that they'll get married and raise Bullock's baby and just be adequate but uninteresting actors together until end times. And is it just me, or is anyone else intrigued about "The Change-Up" now?

Damn you, marketing geniuses!

J. Lo still believes in love

Jennifer Lopez is opening up about her divorce from husband Marc Anthony and what led to their breakup. "This was the hardest decision I've ever had to face. I really wanted this family to work," she tells Vanity Fair, adding that getting her career back on track played a major role in the breakdown of their relationship. "We had the first three years of our marriage just for us. I wasn't working, it was mainly about him. Then we got pregnant. Then it became about the kids. And then I started working again," she says. Still, Lopez hasn't given up on finding love again. "Sometimes it doesn't work, and that's sad. But I remain an eternal optimist about love. I believe in love."

The institution of marriage? Well, that's a whole different ball game.

Ryan Phillippe, baby daddy?

Whether or not Ryan Phillippe is the biological father of ex-girlfriend Alexis Knapp's newborn daughter is still up in the air, but the baby's last name seems to suggest he is. On the baby's birth certificate, her last name is listed as "Phillippe Knapp," according to People magazine, though the section listing the girl's father was left blank. Phillippe has previously indicated he's ready to take responsibility for the girl should tests prove he is the father.

Jenna Fischer drew on her own experience to play floundering widow in her new movie ◗ She knows who will replace Michael on 'The Office'

Jenna Fischer knows about personal shake-ups. To play the Long Island mom whose already rocky life is thrown off-course by the death of her husband (Chris O'Donnell), in "A Little Help," the "Office" star drew on experience.

"I had kind of gone through a really big, life-altering event myself shortly before I agreed to do this movie, which is that I got divorced after having been married almost eight years," she explains. "I kind of drew on my own experience of feeling lost and not knowing who I was. I remember moving into my own place, then, after having lived with someone for eight years, and being like, 'Oh, I'm the only person who has to like these plates. Just me. I don't have to compromise in any way.' It was so weird. You're so used to sharing. And so you feel a little lost when it's just you, at first."

After filming "A Little Help," Fischer could at least turn to "The Office" star Steve Carell for commiseration. "When I got done with this movie, I went in to work after the summer, and I said, 'Steve, I have a newfound respect for what you do,'" she says.

Of course, this year will be different, as Carell clocked out for the last time on "The Office" toward the end of last season. And while James Spader will join the show's cast, exactly who will be taking over for Carell as regional manager of Dunder-Mifflin is a mystery. But not to Fischer. "I'm not allowed to say, but I know who the manager is," she teases. "It's a great choice. ... We're kind of being forced to shake things up, which is a nice thing. We won't be repeating ourselves."

AMBER RAY

Spader 'perfect' as new boss on 'The Office'

NBC was left with a big hole to fill in its Thursday night lineup this fall — and we're not talking about finding a replacement for the canceled "Outsourced."

Steve Carell's departure from "The Office," ending his tenure as Dunder Mifflin manager Michael Scott last season, will require major tinkering to the series. James Spader has joined the cast to pick up some of the slack, and his addition is something Robert Greenblatt, chairman of NBC Entertainment, is cautiously ecstatic about.

"My expectations are always very measured so that we can under-expect and hopefully over-deliver," Greenblatt told journalists on Monday when asked about his long-term thoughts on the series. "'The Office' is very important to us. It's our No. 1 show in all kinds of demos. Shows go through transitions as they age, and I think losing Steve is one of those," he says.

▶ James Spader stars as Robert California on "The Office."

CHRIS HASTON/NBC

The transition on set so far, however, has been smooth. "I was at the first two episodes' table-reading a couple weeks ago," Greenblatt says, "and I think James Spader is completely different than Steve, his own iconoclastic kind of acting style. I think he's the perfect fit in that mix."

The simple life

‘Get Fixed’ offers relationship advice from a uniquely qualified life coach ◗ Where to pick it up

▶ He may be a bulldog, but Sherman is very in touch with his dainty, feminine side.

Sherman understands a thing or two about the good life. He's not afraid to clear an afternoon for friends. He knows how to dig in and enjoy a big meal. He doesn't bother with things as trivial as pants.

Of course, as a former shelter dog, he doesn't take any of it for granted. Now, he's spreading the word in his new book, “Get Fixed: Relationships According to Sherman.”

“Sherman realized through his days hanging out in Rittenhouse Square and watching how people responded to him that we humans tend to overanalyze our lives,” explains his media rep, Timothy Law. “But he lives much more simply.”

A series of 25 black-and-white portraits depicting the now pampered pooch’s laid-back lifestyle, “Get Fixed” is a playful reminder to be generous with affection and appreciative of head pats — skills Sherman believes we all have the potential to learn, no matter our pasts. “He realized that everyone can be rescued,” says Law. “And he knows that once we’re rescued, we can rescue each other.”

'Stayover' relationships

Study subjects: Committed young, unmarried couples
Location of study: U.S.
Results: MSNBC reports one study's findings that "stayover relationships represent a general trend that young people want to delay permanent relationships because they want to finish their education and pursue other goals."
Significance: The study concluded that there was no evidence "of any long-term consequences of stayover relationships."

Chewing food and obesity

Study subjects: 16 obese young men and 16 young men of normal weight
Location of study: China

FUSILAND

▶ More and more couples are embracing stayover relationships.

Results: The International Business Times reports that a new study published in the American Journal of Clinical Nutrition found that study participants "who chewed about 2.5 times more than the typical 15 times caused them to eat almost 12 percent less calories."
Significance: This falls in line with the theory that satiety takes time to have impact on the brain and that eating slowly means people are less likely to overeat.

Colon cleansing

Study subjects: Adults using various colon-cleansing methods
Location of study: U.S.
Results: ABC News reports that a Georgetown University study has found colon cleansing ineffective in treating disease and concludes it might even have adverse side effects, particularly when using hydrotherapy.
Significance: Many doctors advise that colon hydrotherapy is an invasive procedure and should be used with caution. Undergoing colon cleansing or hydrotherapy is not the same as undergoing a colonoscopy, a routine medical test for middle-aged adults.

New gene linked to asthma

Study subjects: African-Americans
Location of study: U.S.
Results: Medical News Today reports: "Geneticists in the U.S. have identified a new gene uniquely linked to asthma in African-Americans; a variant of the gene called PYHIN1 that is absent in European Americans."
Significance: The article quoted the study results as "a significant advance in a national effort to locate the genetic roots of asthma."

Diet

New breads on board at Subway

We've always enjoyed stopping at Subway for a quick, on-the-go lunch — and now we have even more reasons to love the popular sandwich chain: All of its 6-inch and foot-long breads are now fortified with calcium and vitamin D, giving a 6-inch sandwich the nutritional equivalency of a glass of milk. The move comes on the heels of the chain's decision to lower the sodium of its Fresh Fit sandwiches by 28 percent and its national menu by 16 percent. We'll eat to that! MEREDITH ENGEL

Is going raw right for you?

- The raw food diet brings eating back to basics
- Benefits and drawbacks of uncooked meals

The summer heat may be inspiring you to give your stove a break — but could you give up cooked foods for good? Proponents of the raw food diet say you can and should.

The raw food diet comprises unheated foods or foods heated to no more than 115 degrees. Advocates of the diet claim that it wards away cancer, diabetes and other health problems, because powerful enzymes that aid in health are not destroyed through cooking.

"There's no question in my mind that this is the way man was meant to eat."
BRIAN CLEMENT, PH.D.

"There's no question in my mind that this is the way man was meant to eat," says Brian Clement, Ph.D., the co-director of Hippocrates Health Institute, which incorporates a raw food diet to support the healing of its patients. "It's not magic, it's chemistry we're talking about."

But not everyone is touting the diet's benefits.

"Scientifically, there isn't a lot of evidence that supports the benefits of a raw food diet above and beyond what a healthy vegan or vegetation diet would offer," says Monika Saigal, a registered dietitian. "There are some nutrients that are actually more available when foods are cooked."

Saigal also says that going on the diet takes work.

"I think for the majority of the population, it's very difficult to meet your nutritional needs on a raw foods diet. It takes a lot of time and preparation to make sure you're getting the nutrients you need," she says.

If you think the diet is right for you, Clement first recommends reducing your intake of meat and dairy, and then going totally raw on a gradual basis.

"You don't have to take this lock, stock and barrel," he says. "Take your time, and it's so easy to do."

Atheism is not a religion

RE: "ATHEISTS LACK CONSISTENCY": Not all atheists object to the cross at the Ground Zero museum. More importantly, though, the allegation that atheists are completely silent while "mandatory Koran reading" is going on in schools is misleading. I was able to find just one story after some quick Googling, in which the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill assigned a book describing the earliest 35 suras. From what I can tell, this is not teaching the Koran as revealed truth, it's an attempt to help students understand Islam. TURNER HAYES, VIA E-MAIL

The WTC Cross belongs at the 9/11 museum, as part of an inclusive, historical display. However, museum organizers are treating the cross like a Christian icon rather than a cultural artifact. ZACHARY W. BOS, VIA E-MAIL

This cross-raising on public property may or may not rise to a church-state separation violation, but there is a stench in the air over a religious symbol erected and feted as such on public property. MICHAEL MEYERS, VIA E-MAIL

Discrimination runs both ways

RE: "JUAN WILLIAMS' BATTLE FOR AN 'HONEST DEBATE'": I don't understand how Juan Williams can claim that no one should be discriminated against while also stating his fear when seeing women and men in traditional Muslim garb in airports. MIRANDA COHEN, VIA E-MAIL

Washington not a jobs creator

RE: "WHICH SIDE CAN YOU TRUST?": Unfortunately we cannot trust either party to create jobs. Jobs are not created by the government. Increased government spending takes money from the private sector. The money does not find its way back to the people, it stays in Washington. KELLY DONNOE, VIA E-MAIL

Government has sold us out

RE: "DEBT-LIMIT DEAL DONE": The $900 billion raise in the debt ceiling will not even last one year. Every dollar we go further into debt means that the Federal Reserve and Goldman Sachs make more money. Most U.S. administrations are full of ex-Fed and Goldman Sachs employees. Your elected officials have put in question the sacrifices of those who died to protect this nation. JOSEPH DUPONT, VIA E-MAIL

Horoscope

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Although at times you might build upon the thoughts of others, no one will accuse you of trying to take credit for their ideas. What you come up with will be extremely novel and unique.
♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. The respectful manner in which you treat the property of others will not go unnoticed. You'll not only handle things with great care, but also return them polished and restored.
♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. You won't hesitate to make compromises or concessions in order to placate a friend of long standing. Once you start to yield, so will your pal.
♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. Because you're apt to be quite innovative and imaginative, you could be a bit impatient if you think something is holding you back. Remain calm.
♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. Even luck has its limitations, so don't press yours beyond a reasonable amount. Hopes can be realized through patient proceedings, not through magical maneuvers.
♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. It might be wise to try to keep relatives and in-laws out of your personal affairs if you can. Even though they might only be trying to help, they could still gum up the works for you.
♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. In trying to give aid, a friend might try to cover for you by telling another not what you really said, but what she thinks you should have said.
♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. To your credit, instead of worrying about what you might have lost, you'll balance out any losses on apples by finding a way to pick up some gains on peaches.
♈ Aries March 21-April 19. Even though your independence means everything to you, you'll enjoy getting closely involved with another for a common cause. Of course, you might want to run the show.
♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. One of the things you do best is be remarkably productive when on a roll. You can expect to accomplish quite a bit.
♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. You can't help but be attracted to anything or anyone who is exciting and different. Should you run across such a person, take care you don't neglect your old pals for the new discovery.
♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. Your instincts are rather remarkable, which could be a blessing for you if you are involved in some kind of negotiations that require an understanding of dollars and cents. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Surprise, surprise: Eagles scoop up another big name

Vince Young called the Eagles the Dream Team. So, fittingly, they needed to add a fifth Pro-Bowl player.

The Eagles signed free agent Ronnie Brown yesterday to a one-year deal worth a reported $1 million. The 29-year-old fills an immediate need as the backup tailback, behind starter LeSean McCoy. In six seasons in Miami, Brown rushed for 4,815 yards, third all-time in Dolphins history.

"Ronnie is an all-around running back with a versatile skill set," said Eagles GM Howie Roseman. "He can run the ball, catch it and does very well in pass protection. We think he'll be a tremendous complement to LeSean and the other young backs on this team that we really like."

Brown is scheduled to arrive at Lehigh today. Assuming he passes a physical, he'll take the practice field either this afternoon or tomorrow morning. The Eagles have now signed or traded for five Pro Bowl players — Brown, Young, Jason Babin, Dominique Rodgers-Cromartie and Nnamdi Asomugha.

MIKE GREGER
mgreger@metro.us

How he fits

Brown was known as a triggerman for Miami's Wildcat offense and is an excellent receiver.

Insurance
Backups haven't seen much action. Last year, Jerome Harrison averaged about seven snaps a game. If McCoy goes down, however, he's instant starter.

Wildcat specialist
Brown's defining role in Miami. Imagine a spread formation with him, Young and Vick. You don't think Andy Reid is drooling?

Cowboys take shot at Eagles

Obviously, it runs in the family. New Dallas defensive coordinator Rob Ryan fired the opening shot yesterday in the new-look NFC East.

While he never uttered the words Philadelphia or Eagles, he did make the following statement: "I don't know if we win the all-hype team. That might have gone to someone else, but we're going to beat their ass when we play them," Ryan said.

When asked to clarify who the all-hype team was, Ryan said, "I don't know," and left.

Eagles DL Cullen Jenkins responded via Twitter: "Talk is cheap. Let them talk. We are focused here and I could care less ... He must be nervous." METRO

Maclin reports

Eagles receiver Jeremy Maclin reported to Lehigh yesterday after missing the first five days due to an undisclosed illness.

Maclin, 23, has 125 catches for 1,726 yards and 14 touchdowns in two seasons with the Birds. The team enjoyed an off-day yesterday, but will return to the practice field today. There still haven't been any DeSean Jackson sightings at camp. METRO

MAKE SURE TO EAT YOUR GREENS

You know we love a bizarre arrest story, so here's one that emerged last week from Las Vegas. Samaki Walker, a former NBA lottery pick who starred at Louisville, was pulled over by police in a routine traffic stop. Then, it gets fun.

According to police, Walker attempted to eat marijuana. Seriously? Yes. The arresting officers said Walker had about 10 grams of dope on him, along with some prescription drugs and eight bottles of liquid steroids. There was no detailed description of what happened when Walker tried to devour the buds.

Quoted

Not only are they superior at football, but five of the top 20 party schools in the country are in the SEC.

But wouldn't you love to see a time lapse video of the next few hours of Walker in a jail cell, just in case he got high. That sounds like something straight out of, "Super Troopers II," which is due out later this year.

Walker, for the record, was selected four spots ahead of Kobe Bryant in the 1996 NBA draft.

We recently alerted you to the budding romance of tennis star Caroline Wozniacki and golfer Rory McIlroy. Well, there's been a development — sort of.

The two have been joking pretty publicly on Twitter. She asks if he needs a tennis coach; he "might know someone" who could help — and I found that odd since ... if they were really dating, why not text or call one another, instead of putting it out there for the thousands of people who follow them via social media? (She has 165,000 followers; he has 563,000.)

But here's where it gets interesting. Some joker noticed the back and forth and decided to include McIlroy's ex-girlfriend (also on Twitter, of course) in the conversation, saying she wouldn't be happy with the flirting.

Her response? "Bit late for that ..."

Ain't no party like an SEC party 'cause ...

The Princeton Review put out its annual list of the nation's "Top 20 Party Schools." While I haven't picked up a copy of the magazine to break down the criteria, a few things stand out (get out your pad and pen, high schoolers):

SEC rules. Not only are they superior at football, but five of the top 20 party schools in the country are in the Southeastern Conference (Georgia 2, Ole Miss 3, Florida 9, LSU 13, South Carolina 20).

What does the Princeton Review have against the West Coast? Other than UC-Santa Barbara and Arizona State, it's as if they don't party west of the Mississippi.

And no love for the Northeast? Only Syracuse (12) and Vermont (19) made the list. And I'm not counting Penn State as the Northeast, since it's closer to Pittsburgh than Philly.

Woods enjoys practice round, feeling no pain

Tiger Woods is still searching for a full-time caddie. But the good news is that Woods is finally pain-free.

"I don't feel a thing. [My left leg] feels solid, it feels stable, no pain," Woods told reporters yesterday.

Woods will return to golf this week at the WGC-Bridgestone Invitational, his first event in three months. Woods said he felt good during nine practice holes.

"I still haven't been in a competitive environment yet, so that's a totally different atmosphere," he said.

Woods fired longtime caddie Steve Williams last week. For this week's tournament, he is using childhood friend Bryon Bell. Woods has no timetable for naming a permanent replacement.

"I'm trying to play this week with [Bryon], and hopefully next week as well, and maybe get myself in the [FedEx Cup] playoffs," Woods said. REUTERS/METRO

Mwanga knows Union have talent to win daily

Former No. 1 overall pick taking over leadership role Club's leading goal-scorer with Ruiz gone Looking to rebound from last week's loss

GETTY IMAGES

Mwanga will be relied upon to be Philly's key goal scorer.

In just a season and a half, Danny Mwanga has seen virtually everything.

Now he simply wants to see consistency.

Since the Philadelphia Union selected Mwanga as the No. 1 overall pick — out of Oregon State — at the 2010 MLS SuperDraft, the forward has watched the franchise evolve. But now, after some tough losses and numerous roster changes, the club is clearly on the way up.

The Union (8-5-7) enter tonight's match at Chicago in second place in the Eastern Conference standings, three points behind the Columbus Crew. The Fire own the league's worst home record, at 1-2-6, and are winless in their eight straight matches there.

On TV today

Union at Chicago Fire, 9 p.m. (CSN)

Philadelphia dropped a 2-1 decision to the defending MLS Cup champion Colorado Rapids last Friday. It was the first home loss for the Union so far this season.

"It was a little frustrating losing at home, and we've been through our ups and downs since I came here," Mwanga said. "We know we have to come out strong against Chicago. I think we're a confident club. It's pretty different than last season. I think we know we have the talent to win on a daily basis. We have to go out on the field and execute."

Mwanga is second on the Union with five goals, one behind Carlos Ruiz. After last Friday's loss, manager Peter Nowak revealed that Ruiz has been traded to an undisclosed club. The exact details are still being worked out.

"Goals will come to us," Mwanga said. "We are a talented club. We have shown that at times. We need to find the consistent efforts every night. We have to keep working at it every day."

Durant lights it up at famed Rucker Park

Sixty-six points. Draining threes from anywhere he wanted to. Making grown men cry. It was just another day in the park for Kevin Durant.

Durant, one of the best scorers in the NBA, scored 66 points in an Entertainers Basketball Classic game Monday night at New York City's Rucker Park.

The Oklahoma City Thunder forward fell just 11 points short of the famed park's all-time scoring record, held by Joe Hammond.

"No lie, jus had one of the best times of my life at Rucker park..wow! I love NY...Harlem waddup," Durant wrote via Twitter.

Rucker Park is a Mecca for streetball, and has played host to such NBA stars as Wilt Chamberlain, Kobe Bryant, Allen Iverson and Julius Erving.

Last week, Durant said he was "50-50" about playing overseas if the NBA lockout continues. He won the league's scoring title last season after averaging 27.7 points per game.

Pops of color, worldly finds

Previously an editor at Lucky magazine, Gigi Guerra traveled the globe in search of cool shops Now, in her current role as marketing director at Madewell, she gets to stay in one place But her home with Eddie Volchko still reveals her wanderlust

Names: Gigi Guerra and Eddie Volchko
Occupation: Marketing director of Madewell and CFO of Badgley Mischka, respectively
The space: An airy one-bedroom in lower Manhattan

When Guerra and Volchko moved in together earlier this summer, you could say it was a union made in shelter heaven. Their stuff — her painted door by the famous graffiti artist Neck Face and the Banksy print Volchko scored early in the mega street artist's career, for example — blended seamlessly together.

"We both have a lot of affordable, repurposed, found objects. So it's either someone else's memories or our own," Guerra says of pieces like a workbench once used by Volchko's grandfather that they turned into a coffee table. Her own memories surface in the hyper-colorful items from her travels: Bed throws from London's Brick Lane and Tunisia or an old department store sign from Montreal. "You don't have to spend a ton to decorate," she says.
